Born into Love: The Unconditional Love of Grandparents Raising Their Grandchildren Peggy J. O'Connor

It's not planned nor anticipated. It destroys some dreams while living another. It steals health, wealth, and esteem. It is the fate of Grandparents Raising Grandchildren. When asked if they would change anything, the consistent response is: "Of course not, they're my grandchildren." It is estimated by the U.S. Census Bureau that approximately six million children are living in grandparent-headed households, 1.5 million more than the last census. Grandparents range in age from 35 to 85, either working towards retirement or attempting to live on retirement funds while meeting the needs of children now in their care.
