Eighteen year old Paris Branch is ready to leave the limitations of her small-town life behind. Carson, Virginia may be where she was born, but it's not where she sees her future. An inbound freshman at Howard University, she has her eyes on a bright new life in the nation's capital. There, she will truly blossom into the woman she is destined to be. She can't wait to start her journey. On her way home one night, her car runs out of gas. Stranded, she walks the short distance to a local filling station. En route, she encounters Billy Weston, a local boy who has admired her from afar for a while. Just sixteen and still in high school, Billy lacked the courage to talk to Paris before. But now that he has a chance to be her hero, he digs deep to find his bravery. For Billy, it is love at first sight. Paris is slightly older, and Billy slightly wiser; and a romance between two people of different races presents a complication. Both know that their budding love is a problem. In 1965 interracial romance is a dangerous dream to pursue. Determined to win her heart no matter the cost or peril, Billy romances her with a single-minded pursuit. Despite their differences in age and race, her future and his present, and the crippling intolerance and racism their relationship faces, they will fight for their love...together.
