Memoirs of a Traditional Woman's Rights Activist B. A. Hunter

Finally! A modern-day, down-to-Earth romance for the traditional girl! Memoirs of a Traditional Woman's Rights Activist is the story of a young married woman's tumultuous journey into womanhood, political activism, and love for two different men- both father and son. Personal... "Everything was different. I saw the world through different eyes...They talked about sex like it was nothing. But how could it be so casual of a thing the way they claimed? Just look what it had done to my life..." Political... "Perhaps there was a reason why I felt all the things I felt inside- feelings about how something feminine inside of me was being repressed...I knew I couldn't continue on this path of women's empowerment... I proposed that we stand up for the rights of the traditional woman- and thus the term Traditional Woman's Rights Activist was born..." A Story about Love... "God only knows what might have been had I come to him that next day... Yes, I wanted him, but physically desiring him could only ever be the half of my fulfillment. The other half could only ever come from loving him- and in knowing that he could love me in return." Passion... "As I looked around the dark room, I realized I was still in bed, alone. I had been dreaming, but it felt so real. He felt so real. It was as if he had really been there and I could still feel him as though he had really touched me and had been inside of me..." And Heartbreak... "I could barely breathe. I didn't want to go back, but formally leaving him would mean being alone. It would mean doing for myself; it would mean giving up everything I'd ever known...At that moment I would have almost preferred death than to become the modern woman I had tried so hard all of those years to keep from being..." Innocently romantic, passionate, and compelling; Memoirs of a Traditional Woman's Rights Activist speaks straight to the very heart of a woman.
