The best thing to do for someone who thinks hes lost his whole life is to make him feel like its been given back to him. Thats why I can do this. Fire can fix it." William Tucker always does the right thing. He excels at high school, works at the grocery store, passes out bulletins at his fathers church, and still finds time to fight fires as the newest volunteer firefighter in Coosa Creek, Alabama. But no matter how many good deeds William does, it never seems like enough. So when his fathers expectations and the communitys hypocrisy become too much to bear, Williams obsession with doing good transforms into something far more dangerous. "Gibson pens authentic Southern, small-town teenspeak and settings that add fuel to the fires (so to speak) of William's life. Compelling." KIRKUS REVIEWS
