Specific tissues/organs require more of certain micronutrients. Deficiency of such a micronutrient manifests in the tissue/organ that requires it most. Multiple examples of this are given within the book in the chapters and the case history at the end of the book. This book furthers the concept of the 8 variables that determine health: genetic variances, environmental toxins, what we eat, what we drink, how we exercise, how we rest, what we breathe, and what we think.
