Dr. Milwood is convinced that it is necessary for Black People to write their stories as legacies. It is not generally accepted by white scholars but paradoxically it is the historical fact that Slaves Autobiographical Narratives played a tremendous contribution in the Abolition of the Slave Trade in Africans and later the Abolition of Slavery as an institution. In this exciting and gripping book the ministry of 30 years in Stoke Newington is articulated in the sociological, cultural, economical, political, theological and the profound psychological colonization of the Black community as seen and experienced by Dr. Milwood.
