Won-Buddhism Joon-sik Choi

This book is about new Korean Buddhism called Won Buddhism which was created by a religious genius named Chungbin Park (Sot'aesan) in 1916. Park innovated traditional Buddhism in the following various ways.

First, Won Buddhists do not worship Buddha statues any longer, but instead enshrine circle (Il-Won-Sang) as a symbol of the Truth. That is why this Buddhism is called Won Buddhism ('won' means circle in Korean).

Second, celibacy system of traditional Buddhism is no longer valid in this Buddhism. But it should be noted that only male minister can marry, not female minister!

Third, we can find many Won Buddhist temples in the cities, whereas traditional Buddhist temples are located in deep mountains. The fourth characteristic of Won Buddhism is that canons of this Buddhism are written in easy modern Korean, while those of traditional Buddhism are mainly in difficult classical Chinese. This book may be remembered as the first easy introductory book in English on Won Buddhism.
